

1. An internet domain name is an address of sorts used to identify a place on the internet. It lets use go to websites without having to know their specific IP address. For example we can go to Google.com without having to type its IP address.
2. Domain names are important since it can help create a web presence. It helps create a brand, you can create custom email addresses and it can help potential users find your website through search engines. For example if I search “amazon” the top result is amazon.com.
3. Domain names need to be unique since they are used to identify websites like an address. If two houses in the same neighborhood have the same address it will cause a lot of confusion. This is the same thing.
4. To register a domain it means to claim the rights to that domain for a certain amount of time. You have to do this through a domain registrar and it needs to be available (due to the domain names needing to be unique).
5. If a domain name is already taken then you can wait for expiration, buy it from the person who owns it, use a different extension, or alter the name slightly.
